GALICIA BECOMES FRIENDLY BRIDGE IN CENTRAL EUROPE

By Ambassadors' Decision New Territorial Connection Is Made Between Poland and Rumania

By CRAWFURD PRICE

By Cable from Monitor Bureau LONDON, March 16-The signature by the Ambassadors' Conference at Paris of the protocol fixing Poland's frontiers settles for good or ill two delicate problems, which contributed to perpetuating the political chaos in Central Europe since the conclusion of the Paris peace treaties. By this, complete satisfaction is accorded Polish aspirations. The Poles' very advantageous frontier with Russia, as laid down in the Russo-Polish treaty of 1921, was confirmed, and they are conceded also complete sovereignty over Vilna and the province of eastern

Thus concludes for the time being a stormy and unduly protracted controversy. That the decision is entirely satisfactory can hardly be claimed, particularly as far as it concerns Galicia. This province is populated by 4,000,000 Ukrainians, a branch of the Little Russian race, who speak their own Slavic tongue and adhere to the old Slavonic rites. Up to 1918, the side fattle teartiers of Galicia her. the rich fertile territory of Galicia be-longed to the Austro-Hungarian Empire, under which régime the domina-tion of the people by the Austrian-Polish aristocracy was encouraged by Vienna. Upon the capitulation of the Hapsburg armies in 1918, however, the national Ukrainian Council made a bid

Question of Independence

This plan was recognized by the Allies in the Treaty of St. Germain when they assumed sovereign rights over Galicia, but a mandate was given to Poland for temporary occupation on the understanding that the population would enjoy a full measure of autonomy pending a settlement of the question. Without crediting all the accusations hurled against the Polish Administration it is undeniable that they introduced grave measures of repression in order to strengthen their hold over the country. Under ordinary circumstances and in view of the doctrines which sup-posedly animated the Paris conference, Eastern Galicia ought perhaps to be conceded complete independence. There are, however, other arguments which it is impossible to ignore. The creation of innumerable small states in central Europe is not proving an unmixed blessing. The attitude of Russis again has considerably altered the and Mesopotamia, American interests—

Autonomy Necessary

Furthermore, with Poland and Ru-mania both threatened by Russia, the interests of peace render territorial connection between the two countries highly desirable as a complement to the defensive treaty already concluded between them. Galicia had, therefore, to be regarded as a friendly bridge or potentially a hostile buffer between them. It is this latter consideration which is principally responsible for the solution reached, and it is significant that Poland owes its tervention on its behalf.

What is necessary now is that the full measure of local autonomy to the Galicians within the Polish state. Provided this obligation is adequately fulfilled the decision taken is likely to prove the lesser of two evils. In any case it opens the way for the full and complete entry of Poland into the Petite Entente—there remain out-standing certain differences with Czechoslovakia-when the new aggrandized countries of central grope should have sufficient combined strength to stand up even

The attribution of Vilna, including the Grodno-Vilna railway to Poland, is almost a foregone conclusion. This may cause dissatisfaction in Lithuania, but in view of the situation in Europe today it is obvious that a weak Poland would constitute a standing menace to peace. Therefore it is

NATIONS OF WORLD IN SEARCH FOR OIL

Mr. Bedford Denounces Report That Contest Is "Preparedness" Move

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, March 16-"The great nations of the world are not engaged in an insatiable search for oil merely to be able to supply their warships, flying machines and motor trucks for purposes of armed conflict." Thus writes A. C. Bedford, chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, in the March issue of Foreign Affairs. Mr. Bedford comments on the active interest of the British Government in the oil situation since the war. ridicules the idea, however, that the British people are interested in oil supplies as a matter of naval strategy "No one," he says, "could contemplate the possibility of war between Great Britain and the United States without feeling that such a catastrophe would probably mean the complete downfall of civilization.

Pleads Collaboration

Mr. Bedford makes a plea for inter-national collaboration, with a prorating among nations and interests of the risks involved, in developing new fields. Taking Mesopotamia as an example, he says: It is a fact that the oil deposits there are practically an unknown quantity. Development has not proceeded to a point which demonstrates their commercial possibilities. Even if the United States should be given exclusive privi-leges in Mesopotamia no single finan-cial interest would be justified in assuming the risk of an investment which might involve such great loss.

In the proper development of Mosul and Mesopotamia, American interests should co-operate with the interests of other nations, to the end that the risks involved be widely distributed and thus minimized; and also that the resources of that country, shall not, any more

Fair Play Requested

Mr. Bedford points out that all the American Government seeks is that American nationals shall have the same rights and opportunities in other countries that we grant the nationals of other countries in the United States At the same time he emphasizes this freedom to American citizens is denied by the exclusive policies of the British success very largely to Rumania's in- and Dutch governments in the case of oil fields in India and the Dutch East Indies. REPUBLICANS TAKE DECIDED DRY STAND IN NEW YORK STATE

Assembly Speaker Authorized to Speak for Party - Survey Shows Dry Democrats

ALBANY, N. Y., March 16 (Special) -The Republican Party of New York will line up as a dry party, particu-larly as regards prohibition enforcement. This has been made clear by H. Edmund Machold, speaker of the Assembly of the state Legislature. The other Republican leaders of the state organization have given him carte blanche in deciding the policy of the Assembly, which is Republican.
Last Monday night the Republican Assembly voted down the Cuvillier motion to discharge the Assembly excise committee from further consideration of the bills which would repeal the of the bills which would repeal the Mullan-Gage prohibition enforcement acts of this State. The motion to discharge got 70 votes for to 74 against. Six assemblymen were absent. Two of them were Republicans from strong dry districts.

While the Senate, which is Democratic, has been "pussyfooting" on the wet and dry issue since the opening of the session, now that it is positive that the Republican Assembly is dry that the Republican Assembly is dry, the Democratic leader of the Senate, The Associated Press)—With testimony of Sheriff George Bridgeman still incomplete, the trial of William Z. Foster, charged with criminal syndicalism, entered the last day of its crats for repeal.

Speaker Machold said:
There will be no further prohibition legislation at this session of the Legislature. The Republican Party has taken a position for enforcement of the law. Our record made last Monday night on the question of law enforcement stands. Even if the Senate should pass repeal bills, their efforts in that respect will be useless, for the bills when they come to the Assembly will not pass in committee.

Regardless of our individual views on prohibition we cannot change the law. That remains for Congress to do. on prohibition we cannot change the law. That remains for Congress to do. But so-long as prohibition is the law of the land the Republican Party will stand for law enforcement. I do not expect that the Assembly will be troubled again this session by the question of prohibition. There will be no referendum as to whether the enforcement laws shall be repealed, neither will there be any referendum as to whether light wines and beers shall be returned. Prohibition is here until Congress decides otherwise, and we are only concerned now in seeing that the laws of the land are enforced.

Coming from Speaker Machold, this statement is considered of the most vital importance and is believed to indicate that henceforth the Republican Party in this State will make its can Party in this State will make its appeal for the dry votes. It also fol-lows a tip that came from Washington that causes the belief that in the future there will be a greater degree of enforcement activity on the part of the Harding Administration. This is revealed in the turning down of the indorsement of the New York county Republican organization of a candi-

state. Until either party declares for or against prohibition enforcement it will be a mooted question as to whether the State is dry. The prohibitionists insist that Nathan L. Miller was defeated for re-election last November because he was believed to be as wet as Al Smith, his Democratic opponent. Because the latter stood for more popular issues dealing with anti-corpopular issues dealing with anti-cor-poration legislation he was elected,

they contend

A comparison of the vote for Gov-ernor shows that last November about 350,000 fewer persons voted for Miller than in 1920. Of this number more than 280,000 of them were in what has al-ways been regarded as ultra-dry terri-tory. Efforts of the wets to claim it was a wet victory are not to be taken seriously. If it was a wet victory, how was it that Royal S. Copeland, the Democratic candidate for Senetor, defeated William M. Calder? it is asked. The latter pronounced himself to be proud of the opposition of the Anti-Saloon League and said he would make a handsome contribution to the league if it would continue to oppose him im-mediately up to the closing of the polls. Dr. Copeland among his friends is considered a dry at heart.

George R. Lunn, elected Lieutenant-Governor, was the only Democratic congressman from this state to vote for the Eighteenth Amendment. His Republican rival, William F. Donovan, was a wet. The most common campaign charge against Lunn was that he was a prohibitionist.

One who had a large part in the 1920 campaign, that elected Miller, said it is a matter of record that prior to Miller's declaration in favor of prohibition enforcement he was as good as defeated. The minute he made the announcement and received the support of the Anti-Saloon League, his fortunes increased and it has been

Although Smith was elected by a plurality of 385,000, he received but a few more thousand votes than he did in 1920, when he was defeated, whereas Miller received so few, as compared with his 1920 vote, that it makes Smith's vote seem unusually large. In Smith's vote seem unusually large. In Chautauqua County, as an example, Smith received 980 fewer votes than he did in 1920, yet Miller, who carried the county in 1920 by 15,000, carried it by fewer than 6000 in 1922. Chautauqua County has been one of the strongest dry counties in the State and, with the exception of the city of Jamestown, was all local option prior

The vote in the 27th congressional district is also illuminating. That district comprises Greene, Delaware, Columbia and Ulster counties. Charles Ward carried it in 1920 by 19,000. In 1922 he carried it by 1900. Had the prohibitionists of the district voted for the Democratic candidate, Ward would have been defeated. While it is said that New York City is a wet city, twice the test has been George N. Jesse, representing the Twenty-Third Assembly District, was the only Republican assemblyman from New York County to vote for the Mullan-Gage Act. His district is normally Republican, but due to the revolution in New York City against Miller's traction policy, which was supposed to mean increased carfares, the district in 1921 and 1922 went overwhelmingly Democratic, so much so that Jesse was the only Republican to carry the district. Each time the issue has been made against him that he voted for the Mullan-Gage Act.

mination, and as strongly as ever both countries declare that if Germany wishes to come to terms, it can address itself through the Paris embassy, or send a communication to the Reparations Commission.

No Oblique Approach Possible Any oblique approach cannot be recognized. This has been repeated so often that there can surely be no misunderstanding. France has warned all third parties that their mediation would not only be refused, but also resented. It is not that France desires to humiliate Germany, but as France holds that its action was taken under the Treaty by virtue of special separate rights of an individual government, an appeal to England, or Switzerland, or the United States would be insulting to France. A direct offer to France cannot be evaded In view of this undoubted fact, it is difficult to understand the persistent circulation of rumors to the contrary The situation as now developed i turkey will renounce all rights and title over Syria, Palestine, Irak, the will be glad to begin conversations but will never take the first step.

They will not accept intervention They will hold out just as long as may be necessary. Sooner or later many must give way, and as its approaches would be welcome both at Brussels and Paris, there seems to be object in delaying the fatal day. This feeling is growing all round. There is nothing else to be done but for Germany to submit, and the quicker it decides on what is inevitageneral.

PIER DIRECTORS DEFEND PROJECT

Maine Governor's Veto Message Is Criticized

AUGUSTA, Me., March 16 (Special) "Governor Baxter gave as a reason for vetoing the $165,000 state pier resolve that the State cannot afford to spend the money. This should not be regarded in the light of an ordinary appropriation, as it is an investment. This expenditure will bring a sub-stantial return on the investment immediately. Furthermore, this is a matter of state-wide importance instead of being confined to any particular locality.

This is the opening of a statement made today by the directors of the State Pier, who continued: That part of the state pler used by the Boston line needs rebuilding, not strengthening. This will permanently take care of the situation, whereas temporary repairs will be not only unsatisfactory but in the aggregate mean a much larger total of expenses. Only through rebuilding can service to eastern Maine be established and maintained.

along modern lines. I myself am directly responsible for two privately-owned wharves and I am treating the state pier as though it were one of them." There seems to us to be no comparison between two privately-owned wharves, where all public use can be prohibited and where, therefore, neither lives nor property need be endangered, and our state pier, which is public property and over which hundreds of tons of freight are daily handled and where large numbers of passengers and employees are constantly using the premises. Governor Baxter says "that if the veto is sustained the directors, no doubt, will do their best to make the premises safe." The directors cannot be held responsible unless furnished the funds for properly rebuilding this pier in ac-

for properly rebuilding this pier in ac-cordance with their recommendations. Nor can the Eastern Steamship Lines be expected to continue to use the premises knowing the danger involved In connection, the main pier for the overseas business, as well as that part used by the New York line, will be completed within the appropriation, and any cutting down in size or equipment, especially in the grain galleries referred to, would make the entire project a near failure.

Vocational Information Disseminated by Lecturers

The first step of an experiment by Harvard University to give practical advice to its undergraduates in choosing a profession was made Wednesday evening when Col. W. J. Wilgus, one of the foremost consulting engineers of New York City, spoke on "Engineering and the Engineering Industries as a ble, the better it will be for the coun- Career." The lecture was the first of tries concerned and the world in a series of six to be given on various professions at the Harvard Union. Inaddition, conferences between lecturers and students are to be arranged to follow immediately, so that the undergraduates may obtain further information.

In former years, occasional talks have been given on various subjects by prominent men, but it has been unsysematic, and more with the aim of providing an interesting evening's entertainment than with the definite purose of being a help in selecting a profession. For years many graduates have desired the establishment of some sort of advisory bureau where stu-dents may go for such information.

It has been felt by some graduates that Harvard University has been that private detectives or Government somewhat remiss in providing voca-tional information. Many colleges have an officer who devotes his entire time to advising students or in making appointments with prominent men with whom they may discuss taking up vocation.

The fourth talk, "Law as a Career." will be given by James Byrne '77, president of the Bar Association of New York City. Dr. William S. Thayer, '85, chief of Johns Hopkins Hospital, will discuss medicine and surgery. The last lecture will be a ummary of the other five lectures by A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University.

THE DURANT WINS

Jewell and others was finally disposed of by Judge Morton in the Superior Court on March 14, 1923.

Mr. Percy G. Bolster, representing the original plaintiffs, and Mr. Eugene P. Curver, Jr., representing the intervening plaintiffs, presented to Judge Morton a motion to dismiss the bill with a form of decree which they desired the Court to enter. Miss Helen West Bradlee, representing The Durant, objected to the allowance of the motion unless a decree were entered in the form presented by her, on the ground that the form of decree which the plaintiffs requested might leave it open to argument that the bill was dismissed without prejudice, and pointed out to the Court that after six full days of hearings, during which the plaintiffs presented thirty-five witnesses of whom fifteen were parties plaintiff, that the plaintiffs appeared before the Master on March 7th, when they were to complete their case, but failed to produce any further witnesses whereupon the Master declared the plaintiffs case closed, and the plaintiffs then stated that it was useless for the defendants to go forward with their witnesses (the defendants having stated that they had approximately one hundred witnesses ready to testiffy) as the plaintiffs should not prosecute the action further.

The Court stated that it would not grant any, motion or enter any decree which could be construed to be a dismissal without prejudice, or give the plaintiffs an opportunity to start another action to prevent the organisation from going forward, and further stated that it would refuse the motion to dismiss unless connsel for the plaintiffs as especially to start another action to prevent the organisation from going forward, and further stated that it would refuse the motion to dismiss unless connsel for the plaintiffs as especially to start another action to prevent the organisation from going forward, and further stated that it form. The beach scenes are more finished than the other work. They show more planning and labor. The seeming impatience to arrive at the painting process, then the eagerness to have it completed, is not so evident here. They are more than just impressions.

The paintings of Elizabeth Spencer give us scenes of fishing craft and fisher-folk on the coast of Brittany. Done forcefully and in a higher hey, than Ruth Anderson's, the one painter's work thus pleasantly offsets and augments that of the other.

White-Kryl Recital

Josy Kryl and Paul White, violinsts, gave a recital last night in Jordan Hall. Together they played a prelude by Paul Juon, a concerto in D minor by Bach and a suite by Ben-jamin Godard. In addition Miss Kryl played Vieuxtemps' concerto in E major and Mr. White Chausson's "Poème." Miss Kryl, previous to 1914, studied with Sevcik and Auer, and returning to America continued her studies with Ysaye during the four years of that master's tenure of the office of con-ductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. Mr. White was likewise a pupil of Ysave, during the same period

It is to be regretted that Ysaye did not remain longer in this country, for his influence on the younger genera-tion of violinists and composers would have been beneficial. MASSACHUSETTS PRIVATE SCHOOLS SAFE FROM SERUM "Bright College Years," Old

Compulsory Vaccination Extension, Defeated in Committee, Repudiated by House

The proposal to make vaccination compulsory for children in Massachusetts' private schools, introduced on accompanied by a bill, was defeated yesterday by the House of Representatives, after the petition had been termed "sectarian," "vindictive," and likened to the Sheppard-Towner

The vote was taken on the question of substituting the bill for the adverse report of the Committee of Public over "Bright College Years" is made Health, Dr. Charles S. Holden, Attle-in the announcement, it is suggested boro, and Miss Sylvia Donaldson. dissenting, by the decisive ballot of 92 to 43. As the report had een acted upon by the Senate, yesterday's action ends all chance that such Yale's old song may be retained is in-a measure will go through in the dicated by the declaration that the a measure will go through in the present session of the Legislature.

Similar Defeat Year Ago Dr. Holden presented the case of those who desired to make vaccination compulsory for children in private schools as well as public. Albert A Sutherland, Suffolk, pointed out that just such an effort to bring private schools within range of state law had been defeated at last year's session. No reason for changing the action of the Legislature had arisen since then, he declared, and he asked why such a measure should again be brought be-

Representative Sawyer of Ware, who took up the argument, said there was no cause for the Legislature to reverse the stand which it had taken in previous years. He told of the long de-bates of the past which had always resulted in a decision to allow liberty of action. To pass such a measure, he declared, would be in effect a perof conscientious objectors, who might equally well be allowed to go their own way. No harm had come from the present arrangement, and ble to see that any would arise in the future. The most emphatic attack upon the measure was made by Morrill S. Ryder of Middleboro, who declared that vaccination is not an educational matter at all, but a question having to do with public health, and as such had no place in school laws, of which there were already enough. He de clared the petition was like the Shep-pard-Towner bill, and should be deeated in the Legislature for the same

Measure Assailed

No age was set for the "children" who were to be subjected to the med-ical treatment, he pointed out. He said it was a "cruel, cowardly, vinive amendment"; cruel because it rates the victins arms; cowardly, use it was inflicted upon the child and the mother's wish; vindictive, use it was aimed at a definite part of the community in a sense of intolerance, repugnant to democratic gov-ernment and the Constitution. Next year he hoped the repeal of the whole body of vaccination law in the state could be brought about.

Advocaets of the bill based their argument on the grounds of alleged consistency, asserting that treatment of children in public schools should be meted out to those in private schools also. Timothy Donahue, Newburyport, however, upheld the right of those who send their children to private schools and pay their tuition there, to have their children exempt from such form of medical treatment, if they desired.

When the previous question was or-dered Dr. Frederick P. Glazier, Hudson, in charge of the adverse report, said it was best to leave the law as it is. If private schools object to vac-cination, they ought to have the right.

By a rising vote of 43 yeas and 92 nays the motion of Mr. Holden to substitute the bill was lost, and the adverse report was accepted.

Medical Liberty Petition Making Vaccine Optional Defeated by Senate Vote

The matter came before the Senate becoming so low. as a report of the Committee of Public Health, which recommended that the Medical Liberty League's petition, accompanied by Senate Bill No. 126, should not be accepted. Though this bill originated in the Senate, it was first acted upon in the House, which has accepted the committee's report. The similar action taken today by the Senate defeats the measure, which would have permitted any child reaching the school age "who presents a that such parent or guardian is House took action upholding the adopposed to vaccination, shall not, as verse report of the Street Railway a condition precedent to admission to the public schools be required to submit to vaccination."

The plaintiffs say that the probable cost of the improvement would be at least $1,000,000.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TAX PROBLEM DISCUSSED

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 16-Discussion of the financial predictment in which the Legislature finds itself as a result of the popular rejection of the tax amendment to the constitution, at the special election on Tuesday, was taken up at the annual convention of tax officials at Manchester City Hall today. According to the state tax commissioner Fletcher Hale, in spite of pleas for economy and despite a reduction of $600,000 in the state tax, towns of New Hampshire increased their appropriations last year about $1,000,000 over the year before.

The perennial question of the taxa tion of timber was brought up and the commissioners definitely recommended that the assessment be reduced about $3 on every thousand feet to meet the lumberman's cost of cutting, trucking and loading up on the cars. Taxes have been based on the price paid by the purchaser for cut timber, but the commissioner were of the opinion that fairness demanded some recognition of the fact that the lumberman has to meet considerable expense.

BULGARIA DESIRES ÆGEAN SEA OUTLET

Dedeagatch Offer by Lausanne Conference Was Unsatisfactory, as Being in Foreign Territory

By CRAWFURD PRICE

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON. Feb. 20-One of the failures of the Lausanne Conference lay in the breakdown of the negotiations for the provision of a Bulgarian out-let on the Ægean Sea, the necessity which was frankly recognized at original Peace Conference in Paris. As the result of the First Balkan War, Bulgaria had entered into possession of the Ægean coast line from Kavalla to Dedeagatch and the problem seemed to have been more or less satisfactorily solved.

Participation in the Great War on the side of the Central Empires, however, cost Bulgaria these long-coveted lands, for they were then conquered by the Greeks, to whom they were attributed in sovereignty by the Treaty of Sèvres. This document nevertheless called upon Greece to provide a commercial outlet for Bulgaria at Kavalla.

It was therefore inevitable that the question should be tackled at Lau-sanne, and when a compromise with the Turks was suggested, according to which the entire valley of the Maritza should be demilitarized for a distance of 30 kilometers on either side, a satisfactory way seemed open to gratify Bulgarian aspirations.

Deep Water at Makri

Through the Maritza valley there runs the Adrianople-Dedeagatch railway, which is really a continuation to the Ægean of the Bulgarian railroad system. The idea was and is to place the demilitarized zone, including the railroad, under the jurisdiction of an international commission, and it consequently appeared logical to offer fa-cilities to Bulgaria over this route to Dedeagatch. Dedeagatch itself is a shallow open roadstead which it is practically impossible to convert into modern port; but deep water is at hand at Makri, which it was proposed to lease to the Bulgars in perpetuity.

The allied delegates at Lausanne considered that they had at length found a solution of a very troublesome problem, and were considerably dismayed when the Bulgars declined to accept the proposition in this form. Briefly put, the Bulgarians demanded absolute sovereignty both over the railroad and the proposed port itself. In pursuit of this aim they alleged that Bulgarian exporters would de-cline to send their merchandise through Greek territory.

The objection to trading over Greek territory, on its part, is purely senti-mental; and it has to be remembered that while a Bulgarian outlet on the Ægean is generally regarded as desirable, the Bulgars own two excellent ports at Burgas and Varna on the Black Sea, through which they can trade without let or hindrance. The voters of Los Angeles at the general only logical objection to the scheme lies in the cost of constructing docks at Makri, and even this might have been overcome by means of an inter-national loan under the League of

The chief obstacle in the way of Serbo-Bulgarian reunion will accordingly disappear. A Jugoslav alliance, having for its object the restoration of Western Thrace to Bulgaria and the acquisition of Salonica by Serbia, is, therefore, by no means an impossiis, therefore, by no means an impossi-ble development. That is the danger which must be envisaged by all students of the Balkan question, and while it justifies patience on the part of Bulgaria, it demands extreme circumspection on the part of Greek

NEW YORK, March 16—Flowers and plants valued at many thousands of dollars and unlike any exhibited at former expositions are on display this week at the International Flower Show at Grand Central Palace. The plants are contributed not only by Council of Girl Scouts in the tea room. American florists and gardeners, but by horticulturists of South America, the Philippines, Borneo, Central America, the South Seas and the East Indies. Prizes and plate, equivalent to $16,000, will be awarded tomorrow

Among the trophies for which the exhibitors are competing, are the gold medal of the Horticultural Society of New York, which will be awarded the society members who score the highest number of points in all exhibits; silver and bronze trophies of the So ciety of American Florists and Orna-mental Horticulturists, and the orders of merit conferred by the Architec-tural League of New York for the most skilfully composed displays.

Unusual Varieties Among the unusual varieties ex-hibited are the Thelma Cudlipp Gros-

Beautiful for its purity and graceful lines was the first white amaryllis also exhibited at a previous show by John Scheepers, Inc. This rare development of the floral realm, valued at $1000, is about 18 inches high, with two flower spikes on the bulb. Each petal of the white amaryllis is symmetrical and nearly round, the diameter of the flowers being about seven inches. The plant is the center of attraction.

At the present exposition is a fine specimen of near-white amaryllis of about the same dimensions and character as the valuable Scheeper's bloom described. This is shown by Mrs. T. A. Constable of Mamaroneck, N. Y. "Mrs. Warren Harding" was the first prize orchid that aroused the enthus

LOS ANGELES, CALIP.

Dublin, March 16 EAVE to introduce a private bill to legalize sweepstakes for bill to legalize sweepstakes for charitable purposes, was recently granted by a majority of the Dail, in spite of the vigorous protest of Kevin O'Higgins, Minister for Home Affairs, who expressed his firm determination to oppose the bill to the utmost, his objections being based on the corruption and fraud which such a measure would make possible. The Archbishon would make possible. The Archbishop of Dublin, preaching in St. Patrick's Cathedral, supported the Minister for Home Affairs, pointing out that the sanction of appeal to chance by the State raised a great moral issue.
Gambling, he said, easily became a passion. It upset the proportion which existed between effort and reward, and therefore tended to the collapse of the moral basis of the 4 4 4

In an interview with press repre-sentatives, the Postmaster-General said that plans were now in readiness for the application of the "cash-ondelivery" system, but that until such time as settled conditions should prevail, the scheme would not be launched. The adoption of this system, he claimed, would mean increased traffic and, therefore, increased revenue to the Irish Post Office, added trade to the enterprising merchants question beyond doubt, Governor and a decided stimulus to Irish in-+ + +

Ireland had three international matches recently, only one, the Rugby game, being played on Irish ground big crowd turned out to see the matches in spite of the recent defeat in England, the wet weather, and the unsettled state of the country, and enthusiasm ran high, though according to one onlooker, the Scots had few supporters from their own country. The score, Scotland 13 points, Ireland 3 points, most agreed was a fair result, and although there had been heavy rainfall the day before, the game was a fine one. The hockey match between Ireland and Wales, played at Llandudno resulted in a draw, Ireland and Wales each getting two goals. It remained for the Irish women to win the only victory for reland. In their match with the women at Edinburgh they won by two goals, the total score being Ireland 6, and Scotland 4 goals.

Amalgamation plans to be submitted to the Free State Government were referred to by the chairmen of the Great Southern & Western, Midland & Great Western, Great Northern, and Dublin & South Eastern railways, at their annual meetings. Grouping as preferred to unification has been generally agreed upon, and proposals for a division into two systems, north and south of a line running from Dublin to Galway, are to be submitted to shareholders for their approval or dissent, at an early date. All the railways have had to avail themselves of ways have had to avail themselves of their share of the £3,000,000 awarded to them by the British Government under the Settlement of Claims Act, 1921, in order to pay the dividends recommended. ST. PAUL, Minn., March 16 (Special)-The western division of the United States Amateur Hockey Association this season, ended one of the best races for the championship that has ever been enjoyed. The competition was exceptionally close, keeping the result in doubt until near the end when the St. Paul Athletic Club made a brilliant spurt.

Unlike the eastern division leader St. Paul did not hold the lead with any degree of security and until late in mid-season was not even particu-larly fevored as the likely winner. St. Paul won seven consecutive games, starting with an even break in a twogame series with the Duluth Hockey Club, and then defeated the Eveleth Cleveland and Pittsburgh Hockey clubs, two games each. The defeat of the last two came at a time when each stood close to the champions in the standing, and it was this great finish that earned St. Paul the right to meet the east for the national title.
Milwaukee Athletic Club, the only club never considered as a possibility to win the title, met with many handicaps at the start of the season, but every other team at one time or another was believed, by its respective followers, as a possible winner. St. Paul took the lead three times before helding it. At one time Cleveland and holding it. At one time Cleveland and Pittsburgh worked their way into a triple tie for first place with St. Paul, and it was at this breaking point that the champions drew away. Cleveland Made by R. C. Durant went into an untimely slump and St. Paul held Pittsburgh back by taking a

EXETER FAVORED TO BEAT ANDOVER

Two Famous Academies Meet

Tomorrow at Basketball ANDOVER, Mass., March 16 (Special)—Tomorrow the Phillips-Andover Academy basketball team journeys to Exeter, N. H., to play the annual game between the two institutions. All though Andover's chances are not all that they might be, a close game may be expected as both teams have always played closely in spite of their season records.

The series stands 2 to 1 in favor of Exeter. The first contest played in 1920 resulted in an Andover victory by a score of 31 to 26. Exeter came back in 1921 and defeated Andover 48 to 44, and repeated their previous victory last year.

The team picked by Coach F. J. Daly of the Blue to face Exeter will probably line up as follows: Capt. V. Miller '23 of Homer, N. Y., who won his letter as tackle on this year's football team, will jump center; G. M. Mumby '24 of Palmyra, N. Y., captain of this year's baseball team, will play left forward. C. G. Billheardt '24 of left forward. C. G. Billheardt '24 of Brockton, Mass., will probably start as right forward; R. E. Randall '24 of Brockton, Mass., halfback on this year's football team, will play right guard, and E. B. Hitchcock '24 of

Argentina, Italy and Holland Get Byes in Davis Cup Tennis Competition

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, March 16-Seventeen nations, covering every continent except Africa, were drawn in friendly rivalry of sport this morning, when the annual draw for the Davis Cup international lawn tennis trophy was made at the Bankers' Club.

Under the new terms of the competition, 13 nations elected to play their preliminaries in Europe. In addition to 11 nations of that continent, Argentina and India decided for that sec-tion. The strength of the competition however, will come here, as the last two participants in the challenge round, Japan and Australia, selected the United States zone.

Representatives of several embassies and foreign consulates, including Ar gentina, Great Britain, Spain, Switzerland, and Czecho slovakia, were present when the draw was made, and participated in it. The American zone was drawn first with J. S. Myrick, chairman of Davis Cup committee, in charge. Canada first to emerge and Japan next Australia came last.

The bye at the head of the European drawing went to Argentina. France and India were in the upper half, and Spain and British Isles headed the lower half section. Holland and Italy obtained the byes in the fourth quarter. The complete draw was as follows:

European Zone — Argentina, a bye; Czechoslovakia against Switzerland; In-dia against Ireland; France against Denmark.
Lower Half—Spain against Rumania; British Isles against Belgium; Italy, a bye; Holland a bye.
American Zone—Canada against Japan;
Hawaii against Australia.

Amherst Baseball Prospects Bright

Four Men of Last Year's Team Are Back in Uniform

AMHERST, Mass., March 15 (Special)-Baseball practice is being held daily for the Amherst College squad in the cage in Pratt Gymnasium under the direction of Coach Jacklitsch. About 50 candidates appeared at the first practice, and since the first cut about 25 men are reporting. The coach says that his men are in unusually good condition for this time usually good condition for this time of the year, and that prospects for a successful season are bright.

Four men of last year's team are back in uniform, Capt. J. E. Booth '23, who played an airtight game at short-stop last season, J. L. Leete '23, star pitcher of last spring, C. C. Perry '24, another pitcher, and J. S. Wood '24, outfielder and one of the most conoutfielder and one of the most con-sistent hitters of the team. The place behind the bat has been the weak spot of the Amherst nines for several years, but this spring at least three strong candidates for the position are being considered; K. L. NEW ENGLAND SHOE INDUSTRY DEFENDED

Secretary Anderson Says These States Still Make Half of Footwear of Country

HAVERHILL, March 11 (Special)homas F. Anderson, secretary of the New England Shoe and Leather Association, in an address before the Rotary Club yesterday, said that New England still made one-half of the footwear produced in the United States and that Massachusetts contributes one-third of this production. He said that the Haverhill shoe industry has tripled in 20 years, the total value of the local product being $20,000,000 in 1903, as compared with $59,699,812 in

In defending the New England trade, Secretary Anderson said:
We have heard a great deal about New England and incidentally the shoe business going to the dogs, but figures gathered from our statisticians in Washington do not bear out the decadence.

Despite all this talk we have 1500 shoe manufacturing plants turning out 1,000,000 pairs of shoes daily. In January, 1923, scarcely a month ago, our shoe production amounted to 39,000,000 pairs, or 3,000,000 pairs above the aver-weeks to get our shoes into the Chicago market, compared to six or seven days for our St. Louis competitor, we cannot hope to succeed.

As for labor, I suppose you are sick of the subject. Lynn has the same story and the remedy is not apparent. Perhaps the keynote to the whole labor question is the clause in the agreement between the British shoe manufacturers and their employees, which follows:

"It is understood that operatives use their trade skill and productive ability to the best advantage and fullest capacity, provided that they are paid the full rate of wage for all output."

If this was generally applied in our full rate of wage for all output."

If this was generally applied in our industry. I am confident that a great difference would be noticed. After all, if we could overcome all the problems of labor and transportation we cannot overcome the personal inertia of our business men. Individually, we must apply ourselves to the task of selling New England. The industry is in need of leadership.

AUSTRIAN BUDGET SHOWS ECONOMIES

Krone Is Now Comparatively Stable, and New Statement Makes Favorable Showing

VIENNA, Feb. 21 (Special Correspondence)-For the first time since the armistice the Austrian Minister ingless. As the krone has now, however, been tolerably stable since the beginning of September, it has been possible to draw up a budget which will not be wrecked by sudden changes in the value of the currency or political intrigues.

It is not possible to make a comparison between the present budget and that of the previous year, as the devaluation of the krone has entirely changed the situation. The only comparison which can be made is with a budget prepared on Nov. 6 last, but which had to be withdrawn later on account of the lower index figure and the new reconstruction laws, which effected important economies in the state administration.

Budgets Compared

Compared with this budget of Nov. 6. the new budget makes a remarkably favorable showing. The deficit has been reduced to 2,350,000,000,000 kronen. Against this, however, the state railways show a deficit of 2,000,000, 000,000 kronen, which is only 350,000,-000,000 kronen less than the total budget deficit. These 2,350,000.000,000 kronen are roughly equal to £8,000,-000, which the State will have to obof the credits will become available during the first half of the year, the second half. the confidence shown by foreign countries in the future of Austria.

The encouragement to the Nation through this improvement in the budget has been further increased by the success attending the efforts of the Chancellor, Dr. Seipel, and the Finance Minister, Dr. Kienbock, in obtaining the armistice the Austrian Minister, of Finance has been able to prepare a budget on a solid currency basis. Adult Education

Then the women found that the few lessons on a subject, usually given in the short course at their institutes, did not help enough, as points they did not understand would arise when they went to apply what they had learned. So they talked the matter over with the Department of Education, and now in British Columbia, if they can maintain an average attendance of ten, the school board in any district will supply a teacher of any desired subject, the Provincial Department paying four-fifths the costs in rural districts and three-fifths in cities, and supplying free textbooks.

consortium is realized. The economic union between Belgium and Luxem-burg and the hostile policy of the French metallurgical interests toward the Belgian trade may jointly operate against co-operation. But it does not call for any great courage to prophesy that the logic of facts will, in spite of the Ruhr adventure, force a working agreement between the iron-masters of France and Germany. It is impossible to withhold an unstinted. is impossible to withhold an unstinted

A Tribute to French Industry The areas of Longwy, Briey and Nancy were war-swept. Eighty-one fell into German hands. The reconstruction actually accomplished since the armistice or in advanced progress is a monumental tribute to French industry. But it is fortunate for France that through the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine it should have added to its resources the region of Metz-Thionville with its network of a pre-war basis this addition alone would have increased France's productive capacity in cast iron by 50 per cent and have doubled its steel

But the annihilation effected by Ger-French foundries, more especially in the Nord and Meurthe et Moselle, are still for the most part only in course of reconstruction. The fuel question — ever a difficulty in the industry, for France has always depended upon other countries for the greater part of its supply of coke-became accentuated by the demands of the Lorraine furnaces. The French ironmasters who had purchased the German under-takings in 1920 found themselves face to face with a fuel famine. The failure of Germany to make good its undertakings as to fuel deliverles under the Versailles Treaty and the Spa settlement, added to the labor crisis, and the trade slump has led to the liquidation of many undertakings which initially promised great things, and to this extent the French demands from Germany are, at any rate, fustified by adversity. But, nevertheless, the figures are eloquent in proof of the French metal industry. The production of iron ore in France during 1921 actually reached 14,106,-368 tons, as against 21,918,000 tons in 1913, and 13,871,178 tons in 1920, or about 64 per cent of the pre-war production. But on the other hand, the export figures give a more encourag-ing showing. Thus in 1921, double the figures for 1913, or 2,091,000 tons of iron and steel were exported, as compared with 1,246,000 tons in 1920. France and Germany shared the advantage of being the only countries to show a rise in output during the The story of 1922 has yet to be told. but the cost of production has gone down. Wages, coke prices, and transport rates have been reduced. But by the inexorable law of economic neces sity the trend is for the low grade of the minette basin of Lorraine to find their way to the Westphalian works, and, whatever the politicians may prescribe, we may yet see a rapprochement between the ironmasters of Lorraine, the German foundries, and the coal owners of the Ruhr and the Rhine. It is already being realized that this is the rational outcome of the Ruhr crisis. If there is friendin business, there is no room for racial feuds. Mines Were Worked Until 1918

More than half the total pre-war output of coal came from the invaded districts. The coal basin of the Nord and the Pas de Calais extends from Valenciennes to Douai, Lens, and Béthune. In 1913 the production of the region averaged 27,388,000 tons which also supplied 2.241,000 tons of to follow the course of the German occupation and devastation. mines were worked more or less until 1918, when systematized destruction began. We need not recapitulate the ruthlessness with which it was accomplished.

The fact that by the middle of 1921 the coal output of the Nord was, nevertheless, more than half the prewar average is in itself an eloquen record of the effort put forth. The big collièries of Anzin near Valen-ciennes and of Aniche near Douai will be on a normal footing next year, though the big mines of the Pas de Calais may not be restored for three years to come. Nord Will Be Textile Center The Nord, when it recovers from the war damage, will stand preeminent as the center of the textile trades of France with Lille, Roubaix, German foundries and furnaces. The Est, comprising the Vosges, Meurthe et Moselle, the territory of Belfort, and other departments, is the most rapidly growing center of production with Epinal as its economic headquarters. The loss of Alsace in 1870 left the Est to its own resources, which were to some extent developed to meet the situation, and the restor-ation of Alsace will give the Est a new and, as yet, undetermined importance. The Comptoir Cotonnier Français is entering upon a new era of extended activity. With state aid it has floated itself into a strong financial position With state aid it has floated It aims at co-ordinating national effort, combining in one interest spinners, weavers, dyers, bleachers, dressers, printers, and clothing manuacturers. The French silk trade, on the other through a labor crisis. The whole region of the silkworm industry, which extends from the Cévennes to the Italian frontier in the Alpes Maritimes, is suffering from a decline in production which threatens to be fatal. Cheap and plentiful labor is a sine qua non in the rearing of silkworms. Spain and Italy are similarly threatened, and it looks as if, ultimately, the bulk of the trade would go to the Far East. Japan has already exceeded its prewar output. The setback comes at a bad time, for never has the demand for silk materials of all kinds been so great in spite of the high prices.

The industrial renaissance is also evidenced by the opening or reopenng of works innumerable. Hardware and chemical factories, wood-working shops, brick yards, cement works, abound on every hand. The moral of the whole story is that the French people are in the mass much more actively concerned in the arts of peace than in any preparations for war.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

TO HAVE ORE DISPLAY VICTORIA, B. C. March 7 (Special Correspondence)—As a result of the interest displayed by British investors in the mining prospects of British Columbia, William Sloan, Minister of Mines, has arranged for the collection of ores from all parts of the Province for display in the offices of the British Columbia Agent General in London, England.

The British Columbia Mines Department, Mr. Sloan announces, is preparing a representative collection of ores from every part of the Province for use in the Empire Exposition to be held in England next year. When the display is complete it will be the finest of its kind that ever left British Columbia, Mr. Sloan says.

A long open archway leading from the kitchen to the "mansion" prompted my query: "How do you suppose they ever kept the food hot in the winter, having to carry it so far?"

The attendant looked at me with a pitying expression in her eyes, and was silent. Somewhat abashed, I walked along the archway through which Washington's cooling food used to travel, still wondering if the Father of His Country and his guests really enjoyed lukewarm viands. Perhaps the copy book precepts were my answer: Make no show of taking great delight in your victuals; feed not with greedi-ness; neither find fault with what you eat.

"This Dinky Little Room" The boys and girls joined me soon after I entered the house, and such flutterings about, and such exclamations as there were! What was this dinky little room? asked one girl.

"This, Madam," witheringly replied

the tall attendant as he glowered down at her, "was the Banquet Hall!" Never have I heard greater reverence in any voice than in his as he pronounced the words "Banquet Hall."

Totally unsuppressed the girl laughed. "Some banquet hall! Couldn't have given much of a dinner here." I fled without daring to give another glance at the attendant. Upstairs in Washington's bedroom, where I fortunately was alone for a while, I thought once more of the Rules of Civility and Decent Behaviour in Company and Conversa-tion" which so greatly impressed the boy Washington. As I thought of the

Sir Arthur Evans, in recording this discovery, said that it was impossible not to recall the story of the Minotaur. Interesting work is also being ac-complished in Palestine. Excavations have been carried out in the site of Gaza and such archæological evidence as was obtainable pointed to the long period of decay and also prob-ably some interval of complete deserat the beginning of the Hellenistic period (about 300 B. C.), that during that period it had no share in Hellenistic culture, and finally that its renaissance began under Roman rule in the first century A. D., and thence-

The Onslaught While I was idly meditating came a rush of many feet, and a babel of tongues. They were upon me.
Overpowered by the onslaught, I muttered foolishly to myself:

Speak . . . as those of quality do, and ot as the vulgar; sublime matters treat seriously.

Break not a jest where none takes pleasure in mirth.

"Spiffy room the old duck had, eh!"

Depression began to settle upon me that well-known depression of age over youth. Then I remembered that in 1745 not all American colonial boys -not even all Fredericksburg (Va.) boys-were copying and seeking to manners, and good conduct. Laugh and the world laughs with you. Weep, and you weep alone.

The sense of humor has often been spoken of as our sixth sense. However much wiseacres may disagree in disposing of it, it remains, at any rate, a silent partner to the other five, a power behind the throne or clad in motley, on the steps, a sweet solace to care. Crowding Round the Funny Fellow The world accepts its tragedies with decent grace, but let humor so much as stir a finger, let comedy ever so faintly jingle the bells and we're on tip-toe with expectancy and joy. When the great tragedians appear, we follow to the lofty regions of their calling, but we do not coz them or seek them out for our boon companions. As for the humorous fellow, is not his chair ever ready and waiting in our circle. True humor has the sparkle of freshly-minted coin, and is at its best hand, and when bandied about becomes dull and worn at edge, non-descript, uninviting. Thackeray defined it as an alloy of love and wit. Throughout all time it has been a power, subtly shaping the destinies of men and nations. Through the agencies of the drama, the novel, the cartoon, the press, this currency has been coinage as went on in the Elizabethan days has scarce ever been equalled.

The world is greedy for laughter. Any

Possibly the intelligences of the National Arts Club of New York suspected such to be the case when last year it summoned, tentatively, those ladies and gentlemen of the pen, the pencil, and the brush who were known to have humorous proclivities. Mob Football Played on Shrove Tuesday in Ancient Alnwick

THE Middle Ages which have de-serted our travel, our meals, our business, still hang upon our sports and village dances. At Helston in Cornwall you may dance the Flurry dance in May; up and down the High Street, in at the front and out of the back door of each house. At Chester le Street in County Durham mob football is played through the town on Shrove Tuesday. It is on Shrove Thesday, too, that the old border stronghold of Alnwick has its own unique game of football. Shifting of speculative interests from the curious series of cross currents of prices during the moring. Foreign oils, motors, motor accessories and some of the investment rails were sold freely. Subsequent strength of some of the equipments, independent asteadier tone to the general list Bround midday large selling orders and by Air Reduction and Lima Locomotive, up 3½ and 2 points, respectively. Mexican Petroleum ordinarily inactive, advanced 16 points on a small curnover. Fleischmann Yeast and Barnsdall A also were conspicuously strong.

Call money opened at 5 per cent. After midday large selling orders made their appearance. Numerous shares sustained losses of a point or more, with Mack Truck and Stewart Warner losing 3 points each Another effort was made later to halt the decline by marking up the equipments.

Checker Cab after a fractional advance dropped over 1 point. Goodyear Tire issues, however, were firm, the preferred starting with a gain of 1 point. Springfield Body showed a steady tone, but failed to hold an opening gain. Coal stocks sold at concessions. Heaviness was also shown in the Standard Oil issues. Prairie Oil & Gas again being under pressure and Failing 3 points. Fractional losses were sustained in Standard Oil of Kentucky. Indiana and New York. There was a strong demand again for Southern States Oil. Mining stocks were again active. INDUSTRIALS 9914 10734 10432 96 8634 10032 7714 59 8914 97 8914 10214 100 system of so-called 5 and 10-cent 1922. The tonnage of French imports merchandising is revealed by a study increased 730,029 tons. Experts inof the earnings since they were first introduced in 1912.

The opposition experienced some years ago from local merchants, bankers and chambers of commerce has been largely overcome, and the openers and chambers of commerce has been largely overcome, and the opening of a 5 and 10-cent store by one of the Iarger companies is hailed in many instances as an indication that the community is looked upon as growing. Agents are continually seeking new locations. ing new locations.

Last year was the best in the his-tory of the chain store business. Woolworth earned $17,624,399, or $27.11 a share on $65,000,000 common stock compared with $13,022,960, or $20.04 a compared with $15,022,500, or $20.04 a share in the preceding year. Kresge's earnings were $35.52 a share on $18,-228,200 common, compared with $20.25 on $16,110,200 common in 1921. Kress made the best relative gain, showing $23.80 a share on its $12,000,000 common, compared with $8.57 in 1921, an increase $12.22 or 178 per cent. Mo-

The average profits of a store in 1922 in every instance topped pre-ceding years. This was due in part to the improved merchandising meth-ods, but mostly to the greater popularity of 5 and 10-cent stores. Com-bined sales of the four leading systems last year were $280,269,581, compared with $246,829,543 in 1921 and $95,814,608 in 1913. Where as in earlier years 5 and 10-cent stores carried a large proportion of novelties, they are now adding new lines of household articles and wearing apparel.

Sales of Individual Stores Woolworth last year, with average sales a store of $141,427, showed average profits of $15,503 for its 1183 stores. This was equivalent to net earnings on sales of 10.95 per cent, and compares with 9.34 per cent in 1921, when the average sales and earnings were $129,864 and $12,131, respectively. In 1912 the average sales for 631 stores were $95,877, and the average profits a store $8581, or 8.94 per cent on sales.

Kresge carrying articles selling as high as $1 in 30 of its stores, had average sales of $307,507 for its 212 stores in 1922 compared with $280,700 for 199 stores in 1921. In 1922 average profits a store were $31,209, or 10.15 per cent on sales, and in 1922 $17,096, or 6.08 per cent on sales. Kress and McCrory also made good gains, the former showing average earnings a store of $21,011, or 10.08 per cent on sales, for 147 stores, and the latter $7361, or 6.92 per cent on sales, for 161 stores. In 1921 earn

The close of 1922 found all four companies in excellent position as regards capitalization a store. Woolworth, with average capitalization of $63,452, was the second lowest, showing a decline of $2511 from the close of 1921. In 1912 Woolworth's average capitalization a store was $103,011. This showed a steady decline for the seven succeeding years, reaching its low of $57,817 at the close of 1919. In 1920, due to a 30 per cent stock divident, the average rose to $69,307.

Financing Methods

Kresge's capitalization a store last year dropped to $95,416 from $105,737 at the close of 1921, when it was the highest since organization, due to payment of a 54 per cent stock dividend during the year. Kresge also paid an 80 per cent stock dividend of 33 1-3 per cent was paid.

Kress's average capitalization of $103,854 is now at its lowest point, comparing with a high of $123,077 in 1916. McCrory's capitalization a store of $49,759 on Dec. 31, last, was the lowest of the four companies. From lowest of the four companies lowest 238, its lowest point. In March, 1921, a 20 per cent stock dividend was paid, and quarterly stock dividends of 1 per cent each were paid from March 15, 1921, until March of this year, when the quarterly disbursement was made in cash. A special stock divi-dend of 10 per cent was paid.

INCREASED COSTS MAKE TIRE PRICE ADVANCE LIKELY

AKRON, March 15-Some of the larger rubber companies heretofore adverse to an upward movement are low making preparation to increase tween 10 per cent and 15 per cent Prices were increased 8 per cent to 15 per cent in December.

This last raise was divided with the dealers to such a large extent that the rubber companies did not derive more than one-half of the benefits prices for more than a year and followed more than a year and one-half of decline.

Prices of tires at the present time are still very close to the 1914 level. Because of the advance in labor costs, made effective through the granting of general 10 per cent bonuses and the advance in rubber and fabric, some of which had to be purchased on the open market in spite of contracts, it is not likely that for the industry as a whole the first quarter of the year will result in satisfactory

A general advance, according to all information available here, will have market. Low contract fabrics are being moved forward to be used for the low-priced tires, in hopes that when these contracts have been worked off tire price advances will have become effective and that further contracts can be made with a more certain knowledge of the future.

Roy D. Chapin

LTHOUGH he is one of the youngest automobile company executives A in the country, Roy D. Chapin, president of the Hudson Motor Car Company of Detroit, is a pioneer of the industry. For 20 years he has en intimately identified with the progress of the motor car.

Mr. Chapin is a native of Lansing, Mich., where he was graduated from the high school. When the automobile first began to attract attention, and men of vision foresaw the possibilities of its future development, Mr. Chapin was a student at the University of Michigan. Soon after he became of age he left college to associate himself with R. E. Olds, then head of the Olds Motor Works in Detroit. He learned the operation of every machine in the shop and later was taken into the office, where, at the age of 24, he was made general sales manager of the Olds company, then one of the largest automobile makers in the field.

Two years later Mr. Chapin, with E. R. Thomas of Buffalo, Howard E. Coffin, F. O. Bezner and James J. Brady of the Olds company, organized the E. R. Thomas-Detroit Company. Following a period with this organization, Mr. Chapin induced Hugh Chalmers to embark in the industry, the result being the formation of the Chalmers-Detroit Motor Company. For two years Mr. Chapin served as general manager and treasurer, but still nursing the ambition to have a company of his own he organized, with others, 1910, the present Hudson Motor Car Company. Since that time Mr.

Chapin has been its president. Mr. Chapin finds the opportunity to devote much of his time and energy to affairs other than business. He is a director of the Detroit Community Union, the Detroit Symphony Society, and the University of Michigan Alumni Association. He is a member of the Highway and Highway Transciation, and a director of the Michigan State Good Roads Association. He is also a vice-president and director of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. For several years he has been a director of the First National

Following the entrance of the United States into the World War, Mr. Chapin was summoned to Washington to head the Highways Transport Committee of the Council of National Defense. He had charge of this body until the end of the war. The committee was intrusted with war-time energizing of highway transportation, and the development then begun is still having a far-reaching effect on the whole problem of shipment from the producer to the consumer.

Mr. Holden-uses as a nucleus for these four systems, the Burlington, the Atchison, the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, each of which, with the proposed affiliations, would have combined mileages of from 30,000 to 35,000 miles. CATTLE PRICES

Thus far this week the cattle market has been in very good tone, prices advancing until they are 25 to 40 cents advancing until they are 25 to 40 cents higher than a week ago. Buyers are showing decided preference for handy light weights and yearlings are selling higher than the big fat steers.

While sellers are quoting best cattle at $10.25 few are included in current receipts that sell above $9.75 and many good killers of medium weight are taken at $8.75@9.50. Plain light weight cattle are $8@8.50, lower than earlier in the week.

Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Kansas City Southern and Chicago Great Western would become a part of the Burlington System, while the enlarged Atchison would include the Chicago & Northwestern, the Soo Line, St. Louis Southwestern, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, and Western Pacific. With the Southern Pacific are mentioned the Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, El Paso & Southwestern, and the "Katy," and in the Union Pacific System, the Chiearlier in the week.

Larger supplies have checked the advance in cows, best fat selling $6@ 8.50, lower than earlier in the week.

Larger supplies have checked the advance in cows, best fat selling $60 8.50, and yearlings $8@9 for choice lightweights. Choice shipping calves are $12.50, and vealers to packers Hogs are firmer on moderate re-ceipts, best light weights being $8.70, or 35c higher than a week ago. The large percentage of 170 to 240 pounds swine sell at $3.35@8.60, heavy butchers' $8@8.35, and good packing hogs at $7.60@8. Good heavy hogs sell more actively than light. The supply of sheep is again fairly large and demand is slack. The mutton market has been in a slumpy condition all the week. A good class of lambs is quoted at $14.25@14.40, and plain and heavy grades $14@14.25. The general market for lambs is about $1 lower than about $1 lower than a week ago. Clipped lambs go for $10@11.50, good ewes $8@8.50, and yearlings $10@12.

CHICAGO, March 16-The live-stock market while not advancing as a whole, shows a fair degree of firmness. The weakness in steers makes for an uneven appearance in the gen-eral list, which is offset by the strength in hogs. Sheep and lambs are steady to strong.

The financial advertiser who uses the advertising columns of The Christian Science Monitor for the first time will probably have a new experience. He will probably, also for the first time, realize the effect of advertising when addressed to a group of readers possessing purchasing power plus conscious interest in the Monitor's advertising.

Back of these is a desire to do business with advertisers in The Christian Science Monitor, a desire which grows from the knowledge that readers and advertisers are mutually interested in supporting a daily newspaper which believes the world is not headed for the scrap heap, and that honest debtors will pay interest and principal when due.

The Increase of 214%

Stock Exchange Trading Without Feature—Exports Decline -Coal Output Larger

By Special Cable

LONDON, March 16-The tendency of the Stock Exchange this week has been uncertain and operators are not anticipating any real increase in activity before Easter.

The principal feature has been the firmness in gilt-edged securities, to good deal of money from ordinary gentine rails were quiet, but well trade channels, steady purchasing maintained.

Dealings in Kaffirs were confined to mented upon.

Tax Reduction Expected

Expectation of a reduction in the income tax and the present scarcity of new capital issues have also af-fected the movement to higher values EARNINGS OF ALL in gilt-edged stocks.

Although indeed there has been little request for subscriptions for new capital, again this week a number of important industrial issues will be made over the week-end or next week totaling in all some £7,000,000. The Jamaica Government is also to borrow £750,000 in the next few days.

Loans have been in pretty good demand on the money market, although the stringency has not been so great as anticipated in view of the heavy year-end payments to the Government. The Nation's revenue lately has been rolling in fast and the latest return shows an excess over expenditure to date of £102,000,000, compared with an estimated nominal surplus of This fact, combined with the official estimate that the State will spend £104,000,000 less in 1923-24 than in the budget for the current 12

section that has been demanding reduced taxation. February Trade Declines

Unofficial estimates reckon the surplus for next year at some £50,000,000 to £60,000,000, which, it is suggested, would enable £13,000,000 to be devoted to debt reduction, justifying a cut of sixpence in the income tax. To February trade figures just issued with those for January is unsatisfactory, since the last-named month had three more working days. Taking the daily average, however, February exports of £2,400,000 are only slightly lower than January, and though imports are heavily down, the average of raw material imports here kept up very well. There is an apparent adverse trade balance of £16,-000,000, compared with £22,000,000 in

Only in a few grades is the American price fully equal to the value of similar imported goods plus the tariff. Tariff a Benefit

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 9
(Special Correspondence)—F. R. Marshall, secretary of the National Woolgrowers' Association, has issued a statement in which he discusses the possibilities of the wool industry of the intermountain states during 1923.

Unusual interest is reported in his statement regarding co-operative marketing. In a tour of the western states where wool growing is an important industry, Secretary Marshall found that every co-operative marketing or marked individually.

NEW YORK, March 18 (Special)—Customs appraising officials at this port were advised yesterday of another far-reaching change in the regulations governing the marking with the country of origin and distance telephone by importers. Under the new regulation, effective immediately, handkerchiefs imported in half and one dozen lots will be held as complying with the marking regulations, when the ribbons around these handkerchiefs are marked with the country of origin, or when the containers of same are marked with the country of origin.

A decision was announced on Dec. 14 requiring all individual handkerchiefs to be marked with the country of origin. This resulted in a storm of protest, and about two weeks ago the department modified this ruling to the extent of holding that handkerchiefs imported partly manufactured need not be marked individually.

satisfactory to import interests here, and at a meeting recently of the hand-kerchief group of the National Council of American Importers & Traders, Inc., it was decided again to take this matter up with the authorities in Washington. The matter was placed in the hands of David Walker, chairman of the committee on law and customs of the Import Council, who represented the importers at the conference held during the last few days. Mr. Walker said yesterday that the reports received from Washington were undoubtedly correct, as he had been assured by Judge Moss prior to leaving Washington on Wednesday night that the regulations would be modified so that individual handkerchiefs need not be marked.

Importers were highly elated when this announcement was circulated yes-terday, and pronounced it one of the most important victories accomplished under the new tariff act.

SOVIET RUSSIA HAS CHANGE OF POLICY

Slow Return to Normal Position Indicated by Recent Activities of Soviet Government

LONDON, Feb. 23-The Polish-Lithuanian dispute has provided another opportunity of observing the process of Russia's gradual return to what may be called a "diplomatic" position among the states of Europe. Its intervention at Lausanne has been followed by its delivery of a note to its Polish and Lithuanian neighbors which has surprised all parties by the reasonableness of its tenor. The French hail this note as the first sign of a renewed rapprochement between the two countries.

It is remarkable that Russia should have addressed such a note to two states toward whom it has exhibited such belligerent tendencies. There are many Russians, even within the Bolshevist circle, who regard the inas an alienation of Russian territory. Poland under French protection has been regarded in Russia as a barrier to the westward extension of Soviet Bolshevist intervention has usually proved to be militant rather than diplomatic. Taking all these things into consideration, the French may by excused if they claim to see 130 S. Brand Blvd. Glendale, California a change of heart in the leaders of Soviet Russia.

Bolshevist Policy Changes Nor are they alone in this opinion. The statesmen of the Little Entente believe that the Bolshevist leaders are preparing to adopt an entirely different policy. Dr. Benès, in the course of a recent speech, expressed the opinion of the leaders of the Little Entente. He said: "The attitude of Soviet Russia toward the countries of western Europe has, during the last few months, become better defined. Russian policy has lately been directed toward the renewal of commercial relations with the West, tending to draw Russia more closely toward western Europe."

Difficult to Check Bolshevism But Dr. Benès felt bound to point out that Bolshevism had secured such a firm hold in Russia that it was difficult even for its leaders to check its progress. "Recent events in Europe have helped to strengthen the influences tending to a return to the previous policy, founded upon a European revolution," he continued.
"Even admitting that the Soviet Government, as such, takes no active part in this policy, the activity dis played by the Communist organiza-tions and the Third International with a view to creating unrest and provoking Communist outbreaks in Europe, is nevertheless very evident I do not believe that Soviet Russia herself actually desires war; her position is not such that she could lesire it. It is true that in Russia preparations of a military nature are being made, that requisition of stores have been made, workshops mobilized and so forth. But it is necessary to differentiate between Communist propaganda and the true intentions of the Russian Govern-

These remarks, coming from one who has had every opportunity of observing Russia from close quarters, are particularly interesting. With the reopening of the gates of trade, it is probable that the differences between Bolshevist Russia and the rest of the European nations would disappear with increasing rapidity.

Tourists will find our Constwise Service very convenient. The Boston Store

Preaching the gospel of optimism is a mighty good thing—so far as it goes. Our idea of the true optimist is a practical one—the person who acts as if he believed the things he talks about and hopes for are going to come to pass.

Putting optimism to work is the way to multiply its value. Let's not only keep on looking on the bright side, let's continually be doing something to make it brighter. At this store we believe in our country, our city, our neighbors and ourselves. And we believe in putting our faith into our daily business practice.

The temperature is unnecessarily increased because the bath is usually placed in the middle of an unshaded lawn.

Bird pools or bird gardens and nooks under sheltering trees are featured by Mr. Wheeler. The pool he makes is eight to ten feet in diameter. As it is constructed out of native rocks, it becomes a beautiful and nat-ural part of the garden instead of a bald outcropping of concrete. To give a feeling of depth and also to allow for deeper shadows, the pool is from 18 to 24 inches deep. Small stones are placed just below the surface for the birds to stand on while they bathe. The pool is fed by means of a little waterfall, seemingly rising from a spring, or by a bubble bottom: either way it appears to have been fashioned out of the ground as result of the action of the water. The Simple Art of Batik Dyeing

ALTHOUGH I know practically nothing of either color or design, I do make lovely Battk things, and so can you. Just remember these two facts: first, dye will not take through wax; second, light shades will take darker colors, but dark colors will not take lighter tones. Pink can be dyed red, but red cannot be dyed pink.

Bearing this in mind, I am ready to begin. I wish to make a yellow and blue sport scarf. For this I buy 2½ yards of yellow crèpe de chine, 40 inches wide, which I cut in halves, so that each piece measures 2½ yards long by 20 inches wide. One piece I put aside for the present, with the other I begin to make the scarf. On the two ends I mark off a four-inch border, by drawing a pencil line on the two ends I mark off a four-inch border by drawing a pencil line on the fabric, parallel with the 20-inch side. Because I want this scarf to be article, making more of them is a a yellow one with blue borders, I simple matter. With the other half cover all the material in the center between these two pencil rules with wax. To do this I heat in a small de chine and the same dye bath I can make another vellow and blue scarf pot equal quantities of pure beeswax make another yellow and blue scarf (which comes in dark yellow cakes) of a different design, by varying the and white paraffin (also in cake form). For a scarf of this size a 10cent cake of each is enough. After these become liquid I lower the flame to keep the wax in its melted form throughout the next process.

I then apply this wax to the goods with a brush, just as if I were painting any surface, covering all the ma-terial except those parts which I want the dye to take, that is, the borders. I stretch my cloth across two chairs so that the portion which I am waxing will not rest on anything, but will be wax soaks through to the other side of the fabric and dries almost as soon as it is applied. To make sure that the surface has been thoroughly waxed. I hold my scarf-to-be up to the light to see whether any spots are uncovered which should be covered. I remedy defects simply by applying the brush as before.

Crackling and Dyeing

Now I am ready for "crackling," which gives Batik the pretty cracked marble effect. I twist my waxed material much as if I were wringing clothes, cracking the wax unevenly. Wherever the wax cracks the blue dye will take, giving the material between yellow impression which makes Batik so attractive. My yellow crêpe de chine is now ready for the dye bath.
For this I use a package of blue

Living in a Tuscan Tower

THE glorified garret of a poet's height, but high enough to raise their dream"—so a poet described dwellers into sun and air above the it: "severe as a monastery, gay varied level of the city roofs. as a nursery" were the terms applied to it by a celebrated artist. "I think of you high in the tower of your con-templation," writes the man-of-letters from the other side of the world. "A house of defense, set very high" it was in olden times, frowning at other towers across the way: today it is a survival, cozily surrounded by other survivals; a bit of the Middle Ages forming a living part of the happy life of today; a shaft of ancient stone lifting me so high above the rest of the world that I seem to be the neighbor of the stars; all the winds of heaven are my visitors, and the sun has such unobstructed access through the many windows that he makes himself perpetually at home there, and so floods the interior with golden light that, when I have mounted the hundred and fourteen stairs and open the door, it is like stepping right into the heart of a daffodil—a yellow radiance, a lovely rectangular space of happy light.

My tower may not be an ancient among its companion towers, but it is certainly no mushroom of yesterday, numbering probably full six hundred

After that date towers were going out of fashion and palaces were coming in. For towers, in Italy, were the outward manifestation of the conditions of the times. Cities were strait and narrow and densely populated, since in those days it was so much safer to dwell within city walls, with the gates locked and the big iron keys deposited under someone's pillow every night, than in the open country, unless one happened to be a feudal lord; therefore, the cities being closely packed, buildings had to rise high, and so up they rose, story by story, as, for similar reasons, skyscrapers in New York do today. But there was another reason for such lofty structures in medieval Italy. Within those narrow city boundaries feuds were ever raging—feuds between party and party, family and family; and towers were needed for defense, for

So up they went, higher and higher, medieval city fairly bristled with them into the street beneath as into a them, by the dozen, by the score, by cañon, and the noise and movement the hundred, according to the size and comes up softened until, instead of a importance of the place. And what do I not see from my tower! Wonders which travelers come from the ends of the world to look upon for even a few days, and which are socially grouped around me for my delight, at every hour of the day and night.

Close around, in near-by streets, rise other towers, each with a long, long history attached. At the foot of the street is the Ponte Vecchio, and just across the river are Giotto's Belfry, and the vast curve of Brunel-leschi's cupola, and the belfries of all glorious tower of the Palazzo Vecchio leaping high above them all: and on the other side is the Pitti Palace and the green Boboli gardens stretching over the hillside, where the nightingales sing so loudly in the May nights that even my tower is musical with their song. Further off, encompas-sing the city, are the hills, those lovely and sunset, misty-gray with the olives all the bells are ringing. I not only hear them, I can see them swinging joyously out from all the belfries, as the sunset turns the city to gold. Then, as the night comes on, the lights begin to sparkle like a cloud of fire-flies across the city and on the nearer hills.

Indeed and indeed I am happy in south, east and west, over one of the loveliest and most nobly historic regions of the world.

something is said of his accuracy in that he tended to avoid detail on account of his preference for the universal. From "Thanatopsis." his most popular poem, one might very well the Malua reach this conclusion, since in the Tusitala?" entire poem he mentions only the oak -no other tree, and no bird or flower. But as a matter of fact, Bryant, if not often minutely descriptive, is quite as garded them as alien to the dignity of poesy. Only the bee occurs with any frequency, and even in this case one that the alliterative associa tion with "brooks" and "birds" and the matter. Of mammals he introan assortment that would suffice for a zoological garden. The deer, the squirrel, the wolf, or the panther graces almost every page; the deer indeed, if one may judge by the num-ber of poems in which it appears, was to him a symbol of the great forests occurring in some twenty poems Lastly, the flowers of his poetry though but a small bouquet compared with those he could name, are about forty-five in number, and his use of them indicates a faithfulness of observation that well-nigh exceeds Thoreau's. Three-the yellow violet the fringed gentian, and the painted cup-are the themes of separate poems. Of the forty-five species it is rather odd that none, save the violet reappears more than once or twice; when he wanted a flower, he generally picked a new one-the water-lily, the dandelion, the meadowsweet, and a dozen others blossom only once in the poetical work of over seventy years. -Norman Foerster, in "Nature in American Literature."

In Canada, just now, the people and the Government are taking serious account of problems related to.

populations, and the migration and immigration of farmers and artisans and their families. As in all partially developed countries, it is recognized that the need in Canada is for more producers, more developers, and for stabilized markets. And while it must be encouraging, as new estimates are made from official figures dealing with the inflow of European immigrants, it is impossible to overlook the fact, recently emphasized by a Canadian writer, Edward Kennedy by name, in an article appearing in a recent issue of The Canadian Magazine, that during the fifty years ended Dec. 31, 1920, a total of 1,600,122 immigrants were admitted into the United States from British North America. This movement of British subjects southward is shown to have been six times as large as during the preceding fifty years.

Additional importance is attached to this interesting exhibit when the figures are studied in the light of actuaries' tables, to which reference is made by the writer of the article. Taking the totals covering the latest fifty-year period as a basis, the claim is made that the ascertained increase in population indicated in the United States would have been, at the end of the year 1920, allowing for a growth of 54 per cent every thirty-three years, approximately 5,000,000. It is interesting to note the fact that this total, assuming it to be correctly estimated, represents a population slightly in excess of the present population of British origin now in Canada. It should be remembered, however, that in these estimates no account is taken of the not insignificant movement of farmers and others from the northwestern sections of the United States into Canada within recent years. This shifting of population does not, of course, in any way affect the totals referred to.

The pertinent question which is asked, and for which an answer is seriously sought, is why, during fifty years of what has been regarded as a period of intensive industrial expansion, while transcontinental railroads have been built, with laterals and feeders to support them, while there has been a steady inflow of immigrants from nearly every country of the globe, and in spite of Canada's need for the support and industrial aid of all her sons and daughters, the Dominion has, directly or indirectly, contributed approximately 5,000,000 to the population of the United States? It is in an increased population that Canada sees the logical and orderly solution of present problems. It is pointed out that by do bling the present total the per capita debt of the Dominion would be cut in half. The same process, it is said, would practically solve present perplexing transportation difficulties. Increased population would make the flotation of municipal bond issues easy and would attract needed industrial

The conclusion is reached, by the simple logical processes which the writer referred to employs, adapting them and regarding them from the standpoint of a Canadian, that what is lacking, and what is needed, is industrial opportunity. He says it is this that attracts to the United States millions of emigrants from the Old World, and hundreds of thousands from the New. He believes that when Canada can offer industrial opportunities equal to those found in the United States, nothing can drive Canadians across the international boundary or induce them to renounce an inherited citizenship. Unquestionably this desired industrial opportunity can come only through and as a result of the orderly processes of industrial development. It does not seem too much to say that one must precede and one must follow the other as a direct development of what may be defined as an imperial rather than as a dominion policy.

It is not necessary to agree to or to controvert the asserted theory that the remarkable growth of the United States, both in wealth and population, is the direct result of a consistently maintained policy of what may be termed industrial isolation. In less than sixty years, the population of Canada's neighbor to the south has grown from about 33,000,000 to approximately 110,000,000. At the close of the Civil War the country's industries were crippled, her credit destroyed, and her people divided. An American dollar was then worth fifty-seven cents in the Dominion. The Nation has accomplished much since that time. And yet it is pointed out that America's opportunities were no greater than those of some other countries with which comparisons may be made. But it is conceded that American industrialism has drawn upon and attracted, throughout all these years, the surplus population of Great Britain and the British Empire. The fact is emphasized that during the fifty-year period ending in December, 1920, a total of 7;974,716 immigrants were admitted to the United States from Great Britain and Ireland, in addition to those from British North America. Applying the same actuaries' estimates to these figures, a total estimated population of British origin approximating 35,000,000 would be found in the United States.

It is claimed in behalf of Canada that much of this tide of immigration would have been turned into the Dominion had industrial conditions there been equal to those in the United States. It is pointed out, perhaps correctly, that American industrialism is organized, while that of the Empire is unorganized. The plea, quite convincingly presented, is for the adoption now of an interlocking industrial system which shall unite Great Britain and its dominions, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa. A hopeful view is afforded by the prospect. It is declared that the British Empire, exclusive of India, has a population of some 60,000,000, which can be organized industrially upon a basis as advantageous as that of the United States. Looking forward fifty years, there is seen the possibility of a development unexcelled anywhere. Opportunities abound, and in the future there is the vision of Americans, as well as the desirable peoples from other lands, becoming citizens and consumers under the embracing banner of a greater Empire.

GOVERNOR SMITH'S cynical disregard for political humbug has caused a lively flutter in the anti-prohibition circles of New York. The Governor has a sense of humor and a healthy contempt for bunkum. He manifested both qualities when, at the moment of transmitting to Washington the memorial passed by the New York Assembly asking for such modification of the law as would permit the sale of wine and beer, he remarked: "I will be glad to support any bill that will get us somewhere where we can put our feet on the rail again and blow off the froth."

The picture is a familiar and an attractive one to the foes of the prohibition policy. But somehow it comports badly with the hypocritical insistence that they are not in favor of the return of the saloon, which accompanies all their proclamations in favor of the return of liquor to life. Even Charles F. Murphy, head of Tammany Hall, found it necessary to comment upon Governor Smith's frank picture of the joys in store by saying: "The saloon has gone, never to return." Murphy saw the political peril involved in the Smith admission. Skilled in the art of getting what he wants by preaching a creed he never proposes to practice, he avowed hostility to the saloon, while imbued with devotion to the liquor cause. And the New York World, seeing in Murphy the one possible peg on which to hang an explanation of Governor Smith's indiscreet truism, has the audacity to assert that "Charles F. Murphy, by a single sentence, has taken the wind out of a new crusade launched by the drys to destroy the effect of the New York Legislature's recent wine and beer memorial to Congress, and nullify whatever chances Governor Smith has for a presidential nomination."

Matters other than his attitude on prohibition enter gravely into the question of Governor Smith's eligibility to the presidency. Yet certainly if The World is right as to the alleged overwhelming public sentiment in behalf of the return of drink, there could be no more promising platform for a man seeking the nomination than the one so succinctly set up by Governor Smith. The brass rail and the foam, according to The World and its followers in the anti-prohibition crusade, are demanded by a majority of the people of the United States. They complain that the prohibition law is opposed by an overwhelming majority. Why not put it to the test? Why not allow the Governor to seek his nomination at the hands of a Democratic convention? We may yet see the brass rail and the foam raised to the dignity of a political emblem, as in the campaign of the first Harrison the log cabin and hard cider played a dominant part. A mere qualifying phrase by a shrewd and quibbling politician, like Murphy, at whom the finger of journalistic contempt is so generally pointed, should not be allowed to destroy the manly frankness with which Governor Smith has stated the position of himself and those associated with him.

It has been the great strength of "Al" Smith in politics that he has never pussyfooted; that he has never sought to do by indirection things that he was afraid to do by direction. His cards have always been on the table. hy should not the New York World permit him to play the hand which he has so ingenuously displayed?

DECIDEDLY, self-determination has had its day in Europe. The decision of the Council of Allied Ambas-

Fruitage of Force Again Consecrated sadors, as successors to the Supreme War Council, to confirm the Polish possession of both Eastern Galicia and the Vilna district, marks the end of the Wilson era. In neither instance were the wishes of the inhabitants consulted as to their national preferences, unless elections held under one-sided military rule can be called tests of the popular will. Thanks to their army, the Poles were in control, and the easiest way out for the ambassadors was to give legal sanction to their possession. After the award of Memel to Lithuania, following irregular occupation, it became evident that the Poles were to be allowed to stay at least in Eastern Galicia. "If you want a thing, go and get it," seems to be as safe a practice among nations today as it was in the days of Napoleon and Bismarck. "I took Panama and let Congress talk." President Roosevelt is supposed to have said, but whether he did or not, his own party later paid $25,000,000 to Colombia as a recompense. From a practical point of view the European ambassadors were confronted, to quote another American President, by a condition, not a theory. They really had no choice but to confirm things as they were. The time when the allied representatives, sitting in Paris, could recast frontiers to suit their own policies and notions has gone. The flux in which they found Europe after the armistice has hardened into a more solid state. Had they not approved of Poland's possession of Vilna and Eastern Galicia, a big army would have been required to enforce their decision. No one wants to start another war. With the United States out of the picture, the self-determination ideal has faded away. Military force has the last word.

In behalf of the Poles, it should be said that the Vilna district as well as the remainder of what was formerly the realm of Lithuania, and Eastern Galicia were for several hundred years part of the Kingdom of Poland. Though numerically inferior in both regions, the Poles have continued to form the better educated classes. Both Vilna and Lemberg have been and are centers of Polish culture. Mickievicz, Poland's greatest poet, was a native of Lithuania. Since the partition, the Poles found under Austrian rule in Eastern Galicia one of the best shelters for their movement to restore national unity. Whether under the new democratic ideals of the western world the will of mere numbers, the uneducated majority against the intellectual élite, should have the final say in the national attribution of a country is a moot question. Too much emphasis on nationality alone has ended in a Balkanized Europe.

Against these considerations must be set down the facts that Vilna was the historic capital of Lithuania and is still claimed as such by the race. Polish troops occupied it in defiance of the League of Nations, which had decided on a plebiscite under neutral control. Though repudiating responsibility for the insurrectionists, the Polish Government has since accepted the benefit of their lawless act. In Eastern Galicia, where 75 per cent of the population is Ruthenian, an independent republic was proclaimed at the end of the war, only to be crushed by the Polish troops. "The Supreme Council permitted the Polish armies to occupy the country temporarily for defense against the threatened Soviet invasion, but with the promise that the political status should be arranged by the Council in accordance with the wishes of the population," wrote Henry W. Nevinson in The Manchester Guardian Weekly for Dec. 8, 1922. This promise has not been fulfilled. While at Vilna the Lithuanians may protest with Russian backing, the Ruthenians will have to wait for a while. By the treaty of Riga the Russians abandoned them in 1920.

WHEN the potent influence is considered which descriptive stories dealing with animals exercise on the popular imagination, it is almost trite to say that it is important they should carry a constructive moral. Two articles in current magazines illustrate by contrast this fact, however, better than any lengthy dissertation. One is a story dealing with the methods employed by a well-known motion picture director in training animals entirely by humane measures for most difficult feats of acting before the camera; the other is an article dealing with the methods used in capturing and taming a herd of wild elephants. It is not the purpose here to criticize the procedure employed in this latter instance, if it is deemed essential by those using it; rather, it is designed to point out that the lurid description of such details is anything but conducive to real helpfulness for either readers or animals.

Taking the last-mentioned article first, whoever peruses it will learn that after a large bull had been held captive four days, "he was not only hungry, but tormented with thirst. He had been given no water. He was lunging and striking at anything in sight." Then he was bowled over by a charge from two tame elephants. He "struck the ground heavily with a great gasp," and four men beat him with thick rattan for about three minutes. He was allowed to get up, and the process was repeated three times, when he gave in with a roar. "He had had enough punishment. His resistance was Contrariwise, the other trainer, who has many remarkable results to his credit, reasons in the exactly opposite manner, along this line: The first thing to be lone, in the case of an animal, is to make it realize that it need have no fear of you. In establishing this sense, he urges it is important never to tease an animal, nor to play practical jokes on it, nor to laugh at its mistakes. Always treat it, he adds, with respect, remembering that an animal craves affection and companionship, and responds to kindness and understanding with eagerness. Therefore, make it feel safe with you, and do not be in a hurry to force even your friendship upon it. Always keep faith with an animal, he explains. "That's the way to win any animal: dog, tiger, wolf, skunk-or man or woman.

Which of these two stories will do the greater good?

Editorial Notes

Even if the theory of Dr. Alfred Wegener, a German geographer and meteorologist, that the great continents-Africa, the Americas, Antarctica, Asia, Australia, and Europe—once formed a coherent mass, but for long ages have been engaged in a slow process of drifting apart, does not survive, it has had the signal merit of bringing together for comparison many of the separate modes of exploring the present and past history of the globe. A glance at the map shows, it is true, that the western shores of Africa-Europe show a remarkable congruity with the eastern contours of the Americas. Similarly the south of Asia-Africa may be adjusted to Australia-Antarctica. But evidences of actual drifting are so slight and dubious as to be practically negligible, though since 1920, when it was launched in a book, the drift theory has remained a center of debate, and has been discussed at many meetings of geographers, geologists, and biologists. Appearances indicate, however, that it is far from done with yet.

A woman who spends many of her week-end holidays driving about the country was quoted recently as stating that the coal shortage in America is responsible for the revival of one of the most picturesque of outdoor sports. By this she meant, it appears, that along the beaches of Long Island and Jersey dozens and dozens of persons may be seen of a Sunday gathering driftwood to take the place of the coal they cannot procure. This woman explained that this wood made the most beautiful fire and added that "while you sit about your fireplace, watching the blue and green and yellow flames licking in and out among the bits of wreckage, you forget there is no coal in your furnace." Perhaps she is right, but it would be safe to say that the great majority of those indulging in this picturesque sport would willingly pay the price of a ton of coal not to be doing so, and would gladly forgo the pleasures of the fireplace to have a good fur-

What Is the Correct Pronunciation?

YEARS ago, the Legislature of Arkansas passed a legal enactment to the effect that the last syllable of their state's proud name is pronounced "aw." "Is pronounced," not "is to be pronounced." No statutory penalty was attached to the use of pronunciations other than the one declared standard, and the citizens of the state, devoted to the unwritten law though some of them may be, do not visit it upon the uninformed stranger who pronounces the commonwealth's name as if it were a variant of the name of neighboring Kansas. Since no common council has decreed what should be the official pronunciation of the name of any American cities, we flounder in some confusion. Indeed, five states besides Arkansas offer cases of varying pronunciation of the state name.

Dismissing Illinoise as an undefended provincialism, we may ask whether Iowa is pronounced with the accent on o and the a as Italian a-rather short Italian a-or whether Ioway, all syllables stressed alike, or first syllable stressed, offers the correct pronunciation. When the state name was chosen, Americans pronounced final a as long English a. To give its phonetic value here in these days when the use of the Roman method of pronouncing Latin and the constant hearing of European languages has somewhat Europeanized our vowels, we should have to spell it "Ioway."

Forty years ago, Nashua, New Hampshire, was always pronounced Nashuway, a spelling used by the country club of that city; and Mt. Chocorua is still pronounced after the ancient fashion, though a conforming to modern style is beginning. Ioway was undoubtedly once the correct pronunciation, though now almost, though not quite, branded as a pro-

Is it Utah, as spelled, or Utaw? If Iowa has seen English a changed to Italian a, will Nevada permit its first a to pass from sonorous Spanish a to flat long English a, and will Colorado allow Spanish a to become transformed to that still flatter a, as in pad?

If in Missouri you apostrophize the state by any other collocation of vocables than "Mizzourah," as the citizens of other states would render it, you encounter a seldom concealed scorn. It is much the same thing if along the Ohio and the Miami and the Scioto you fail to say "Cincinnatuh," a curious rendition that seems an attempt to approximate the name of the city to that of the great Roman called from his plow to the dictatorship of the imperial city.

There are within the ample bounds of Chicago hard-headed, logical citizens who, with some defiance in their mien, pronounce the second syllable of the city's name "ah," not "aw." They demand of you to show a single word in the English language where a before g has the sound "aw." You can't, but you can reply that not outside the east, and not often there, does one give a before g the sound "ah." We pronounce the "Chi" as if it were French, giving the Ch the soft French sound and the i a sound it infrequently has in English.

We might explain the matter by saying that Chicago is the French phonetic rendering of the original Indian, that we took over the French spelling and pronunciation of the name which, if expressed phonetically in English, would have to be spelled "Sheecawgo." You may object that the French pronunciation is "ah," not "aw." Nevertholess, it is true that we did take the name as the French explorers and settlers in Illinois spelled it and subsequently, in the slovenly way peculiar to many languages besides English, changed the "ah" to an unwarranted, though in this case more pleasing, "aw."

A large portion of New York's population call their long, narrow home (not as Homer uses the expression) "N'Yock." This saves time and time is money, but they usually lose this time by affixing "little ole" to "N'Yock," a curious pretended deprecation and insincere modesty.

All young women in good society in Louisville-well, they pronounce Louis in the French fashion and ville in English. It is Loueeville, the ee sound hardly so long as the two e's indicate. Men of affairs in that city who assertively look down upon feminism and the frills of life, though often wearing fancy vests themselves, say "Lewisville," challengingly, their tone charged with contempt for anyone who would prenounce it otherwise. Most of us will vote with the Louisville young women, who, as everybody knows who knows anything worth knowing, are unsurpassed in pulchritude. Is it St. Lewis, St. Louee, or Sin' Louee?

Is it St. Paul, or Sin' Paul? Is it New Orleans or N'Orleans? Again we may note the predilection of the women, which is totally for N'Orleans, and though French has no accent, N'Or is borne down upon heavily and -leans is

Many good citizens, and possibly some bad ones, of Wisconsin's metropolis say "Meelvowkee," though this has never gained acceptance with the school board. What a number of pronunciations there are of Pueblo. What is the correct pronunciation of Los Angeles? The most common one is a sort of compromise between the original Spanish one and the natural English one. We hear Los Angelus, which at least gets the Spanish sound of final s, and Los Angelees, which doesn't.

Neither common custom nor common council has established a standard pronunciation of the names of quite a number of the larger cities of America.

Money and Social Standing

WHERE money does not buy social standing, men do not bother to earn more than a mere bread-and-butter minimum of it, according to Whiting Williams in Scribner's Magazine. Thus in certain coal towns where work is regular, the thriftlessness and loafing of the miners appear to justify their employers' theory that they "have no sense of decency, no selfrespect!" As a matter of fact, it is all simple—and human enough. A high tonnage or day rate has been given the coal miner everywhere to make up for the irregularity of his job. Where he is lucky enough to have full opportunity to work, the miner's money may have to lie in the bank because it may be impossible to buy a house-perhaps there won't be any town there when the coal seam is worked out, fifteen years later. He may also be unable even to rent a better home, because the company furnishes only three kinds, and he has lived in "Class A" for years. Perhaps the roads are too bad for an auto. Naturally, nobody wants to go around showing off his bankbook-unless, like many of our lowliest foreign born, he is saving for the farm—and the standing of a landed gentleman—back in Poland! So there is only one thing he can do, and he does that for exactly the same reason that the mine manager in the near-by city builds his house or buys a limousine-namely, to indicate the distance he has achieved from the days of his flivverdom. He can take his dinner bucket and walk out of the mine several hours before quitting time, enjoying the satisfaction of saying thus to all his neighbors: "You see, I can earn my living in half the time these other guys can, because I use my head-I was taught this business of mining by my father!"
